the authors' own findings (1997). Further, the authors conclude that the use of a single, non-validated measure of "negative affect" is a major methodological weakness of the study. They note that, in addition, "One of the most basic methodological flaws in the analysis and results of the study is the failure to control for the effects of the negative affect measure on the dependent variable." The authors conclude that the study is "methodologically flawed" and that the authors' conclusions are "unreliable and invalid." The authors also note that the study's findings are "inconsistent with the findings of other studies" and that the study's conclusions are "not supported by the data." The authors conclude that the study is "methodologically flawed" and that the authors' conclusions are "unreliable and invalid."
